

The Farce of Un- fulfilment | The 1990s

Remember the nineteen nineties? For Canary Wharf it's a bit of a blur. In The Farce of Unfulfilment a fifteen-year-old Canary develops an unhealthy relationship with the newly opened Limehouse Link tunnel after her foster carer, Jeremy Shaw, shares his dark fixation that the British National Party candidate who is about to win the 1993 Millwall by-election is her biological father.

That's all she remembers, as Canary's final chapter for the 20th century culminates in a blackout that lasts until the 2008 financial crisis, wherein our endlessly mutable narrator reappears after Britain's supposed boom time to market failure, a spiralling rentier economy and general disarray. A dark tunnel, the 1990s Architectural Fathers by Canary Wharf.

Architectural Fathers by Canary Wharf

is a serialised memoir written by the daughter of various men involved in the evolution and construction of London's second financial district, Canary Wharf. Like shards of a broken mirror each chapter reflects a different father from a different vantage point of the development's history in this multi-layered portrait of some of the world's most sought after office, retail and residential space.
